

Chinese Academy of Sciences ties up with QAI to build IT Certification Centre

- Navyug Mohnot to be Visiting Professor for their College of Computing and Communication Engineering

New Delhi, December 2008. The Graduate University of Chinese Academy of Sciences (GUCAS), the country's premiere institute for scientific research and education, has tied up with QAI, a global consulting firm addressing the area of Operational excellence, to co-build a certification centre with its College of Computing and Communication Engineering (CCCE). A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) to this effect was signed between Asst. Dean and Associate Professor of GUCAS, Ms. Wang Ying and QAI's global CEO, Mr. Navyug Mohnot during the latter's recent visit to the CCCE campus.

Mr. Navyug Mohnot was also bestowed with the honour of being appointed visiting professor of CCCE, and will visit CCCE every year exchanging and communicating the best practices and latest development in this industry.

A visibly happy Mr. Mohnot, reacted to the developments saying, "QAI is synonymous with quality. We strengthen organizations around the world by enabling them with operational excellence. Certifications are a global recognition to the excellence which an individual or an organization attains. It helps them endorse their identity much strongly and stand above the crowd. This certification centre would definitely help Chinese students as well as organizations broaden their horizons and get their skills recognized at a global level."
